PLACEMAKING – MORE POWER TO THE PEOPLE

The Placemaking Strategy, which Council has placed great store by, is designed to provide the overarching framework to support the creation of 'One City, Many Places'. The strategy provides a platform for Council to work together with the people of the City in new and more sustainable ways (to quote from the Council Strategy document)

The first stage of the strategy is intended to span over a period of two years and is part of the Strategic Plan 2012-2016, The Smart Move Strategy as well as the State Government's 30 Year Plan for Greater Adelaide

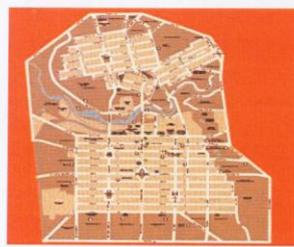

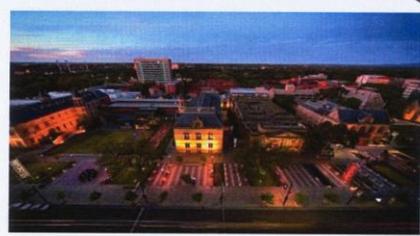

Placemaking by its very nature is dynamic and iterative and the strategy will continually evolve and adapt to changes and agreed priorities over this two year timeframe. Essentially it is about creating many places in our city, places which are different but which are linked together and places that people want to be a part both in their design and their use.

"The concepts behind Placemaking got traction in the 1960s, when visionaries like Jane Jacobs and William H. Whyte offered groundbreaking ideas about designing cities that catered to people, not just to cars and shopping centres. Their work focused on the importance of lively neighbourhoods and inviting public spaces. Jane Jacobs advocated citizen ownership of streets through the now-famous idea of "eyes on the street." and an emphasis on the essential elements for creating social life in public spaces."

"Applying the wisdom of Jacobs, Whyte, and others, Project for Public Spaces (PPS) gradually developed a comprehensive Placemaking approach for helping communities make better public spaces beginning in 1975. The term can be heard in many settings – not only by citizens committed to grassroots community improvement but by planners and developers who use it as a fashionable brand" (Quote from PPS document)

All that has happened in recent times is that a new 'profession' of placemakers has been spawned complete with a new nomenclature and a jargon all of its own. My plea is to strip away that jargon, demystify the whole process and make it easy for the community to understand and identify with.

Council believes that our citizens want Adelaide to become more vibrant (whatever that means) a place where people want to spend more time. Council believes that this involves creating in our CITY a series of well-planned, connected and unique DISTRICTS that have a collection of PLACES with distinct characters and styles. It is about creating great places with people, places for living, where community life can flourish, businesses can grow and knowledge and creativity can flourish.

 Our City The local government area, bounded by the Adelaide Park Lands, governed by the Adelaide City Council	 Our Districts Are physical locations containing places with similar characteristics or places complementary to each other. They are a geographic area where it makes sense to plan the implementation of actions and initiatives across several places	 Our Places Are physical locations within the city. Place boundaries may be natural geographic points or where there is a commonality and density of human activity or experience in a particular location.

Three place pilots will be undertaken by Council over the next two years – in Melbourne Street, Pitt and Waymouth Streets (and I hope Topham Mall) and Hindley Street/West End. Others may be considered if an opportunity arises.

- Council will explore the current value of the place and its desired identity,
- co-create a vision for the place through deep engagement (Placemaking Jargon!)
- experiment with temporary approaches similar to Splash Adelaide,
- Establish governance mechanisms
- Implement place strategies to support the place vision in conjunction with partners and place users (more Placemaking Jargon!)...oh and somewhere in the process let's hope your elected Councillors will be involved!

BOGANVILLE IS BEING BUMPED-OUT

Yes, as I write these Notes the last petrol-heads have returned to their bolt-holes, the city's roads have been restored to their rightful users, the safety features of the Britannia Roundabout are being rebuilt, the first tentative moves to dismantle the numerous monstrous structures have begun (the usual ute with a couple of guys and a spanner have arrived in Victoria Park) and the flora and fauna of the park will begin its long journey back to what nature intended. New 'core motor sport events'(sic) such as Tractor Pull and BMX contests took their toll on pristine parts of the park. The plant nursery and associated truck movements did untold damage to the recently established East Tce edge of the park – grass turned into dust bowls, a relocated works compound, bigger and uglier than ever and newly grassed playing fields used for car parking.

To be fair, the early construction phases were better managed than in earlier years and park users had an active help-line to the construction managers but in the end, things returned to form with a basic disrespect for the intrinsic value of the Park to all citizens. Clipsal operates under an all-enabling act – the law is clearly on their side but morally and ethically the Board would surely want to do better and I believe that with a little more effort it could both deliver a great event AND be a good neighbour.
